Klement's Sausage Company Voluntarily Recalls Beef Sticks
Recall is limited to a single, non Klement branded product.

Milwaukee, WI (October 25, 2010)- On Friday, October 22, 2010 the Klement Sausage Company voluntarily initiated a Class II recall. The recall was related to an allegation of foreign matter in a beef stick product and was performed to remove any further product from the market place. At this time this is an isolated incident of 2,640 lbs and the recall is limited to one single private label brand. No Klement label product or any other private label product is included in this voluntary recall. We are continuing to work with the USDA to further investigate.

With over 50 years in the sausage industry, Klement Sausage manufactures over one million pounds of beef sticks a year under multiple branded and private labels. The quality of our products has always and will continue to remain our number one focus. We follow all USDA and HACCP guidelines and will continue to invest in the safety of our plants.

The suspect beef sticks are contained to one batch and the following is the information that is printed on the bottom of the front panel of package in black ink:

Brand: Market Pantry
